THE LINE-UP

The conference we want to go to.

Vancouver's conference scene leaves a lot to be desired. Most days out are a room of people selling you something, or speaking and saying a whole lot of nothing. The events actually worth attending run $400 to $1,000 — which prices out the exact people who'd get the most from them.

So we're building the one we'd buy a ticket to: high-level names at a community-level price, often enough that there's more than one thing a year to look forward to.

OPENING KEYNOTE

EPICWEB.DEV · UTAH

Kent C. Dodds

A full-time software educator, and one of the most widely followed teachers in the JavaScript world. He created React Testing Library and grew the Testing Library ecosystem into one of the most-used testing toolchains in JavaScript.

He represented PayPal on TC-39, the committee that standardises JavaScript itself. He has given more than a hundred conference talks, and built the platforms a lot of working developers came up on — EpicWeb.dev, EpicReact.dev and TestingJavaScript.com.

He has spoken at React Conf, React Summit, Laracon, AgentConf and Cloudflare Connect. On 10 November, he opens VanSpace.

If it runs

Platinum seat available

No session-by-session schedule in this deck — the line-up is still filling, and Gold sessions are part of what's for sale.

THE COMMUNITY

Fun for the

We’re not starting from zero and hoping people turn up. We’ve been running rooms in this city with the student groups and studios who already have them.

ON CAMPUS

We run them with the student groups, not at them.

Our last campus room was built with a student association and hosted at BCIT — one brief, one afternoon, and our partners’ marks on the screen behind everyone.

IN THE ROOM

Builders who actually ship.

A full day of building with a studio partner. Teams formed on the spot and had working projects by the end of it — students, career-switchers and working engineers on the same sofa.

“Another hackathon W — we placed 2nd with our accountability app.”

CS student, UBC

AND THEY COME BACK

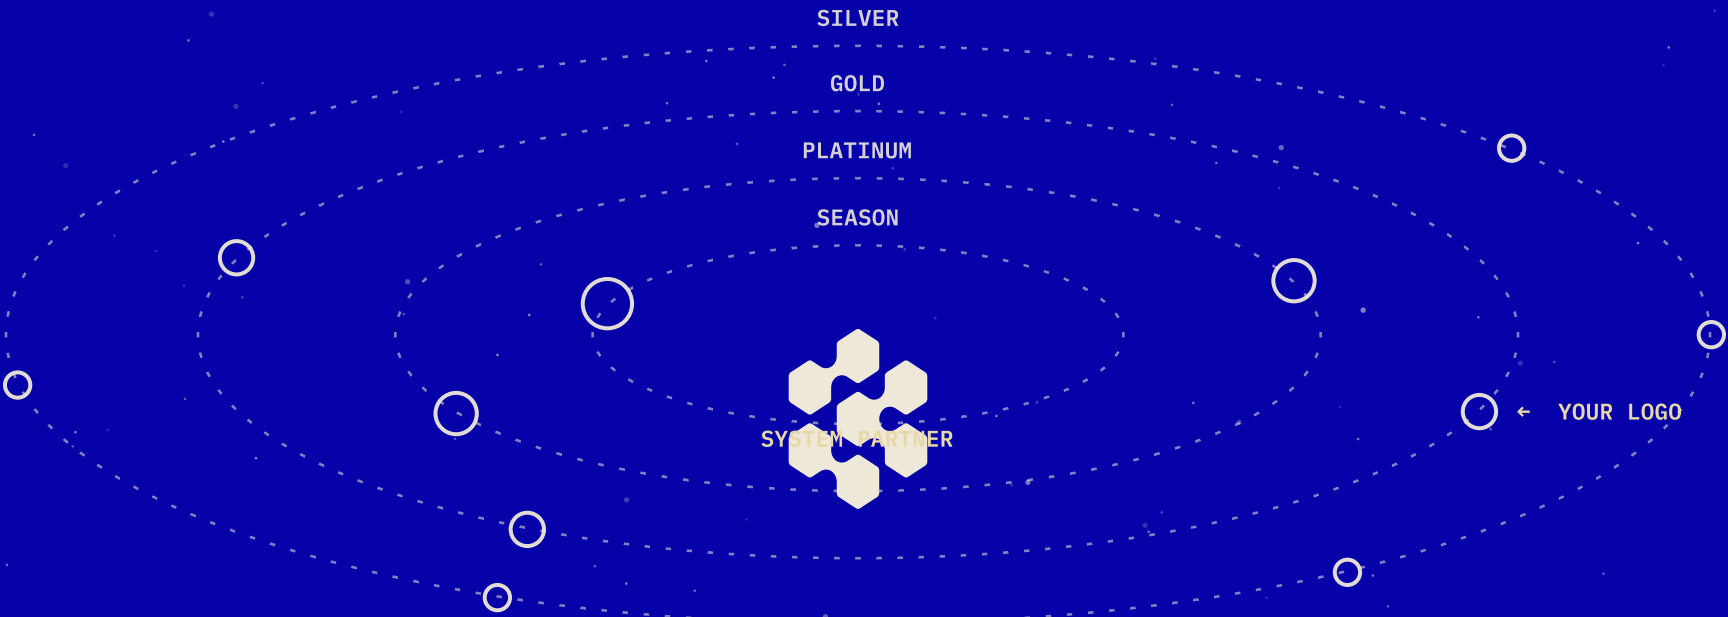

The same faces, one event to the next.

Nobody asks anyone to post about it afterwards — they just do, from BCIT faculty to first-time hackers. Three more student groups are already in conversation for September.

SPONSORS IN ORBIT

Your logo, in orbit.

The whole day runs as one system — on the site, on the screens, and in the room. Your tier decides which ring you sit in. Gold rides the third.

RING 01

Season Partner

One slot, both events, closest in.

RING 02

Platinum

Major stage and a priority table.

RING 03

Gold

A session and a staffed table.

RING 04

Silver

Lightning talk or a panel seat.

Same map runs live on vanspace.dev — your mark appears in the orbit the day you sign, not the week of the event.

WHAT YOU GET

Six places your brand actually lands.

No logo walls. Every tier buys a surface you can point at — and we tell you exactly how big it is.

01 THE WEBSITE

vanspace.dev

Your mark on the event page, ranked by tier and linked out to you — a real link, not a flat image. Season Partners sit on the homepage between events.

02 THE SWAG

We make the bag

Tee, stickers, badge and lanyard. Sponsors get physical inserts by tier. The Season Partner’s mark goes on the tee itself — not a flyer inside it.

03 THE STAGE

Real speaking time

20–40 minutes depending on tier. Talk, demo, or fireside — your call. Not a thirty-second thank-you slide before lunch.

04 THE ROOM

A table where lunch happens

A staffed table in the hallway, not a back corner. Single track means the whole room walks past you between every block.

05 THE RECAP

Numbers, not vibes

A post-event report within a week — headcount, engagement, and a photo kit you can actually post.

06 THE ANNOUNCE

You get named early

A post when you sign, a tag on the line-up drop, and a line in the attendee email. Not just day-of.

PLACEMENT Logo rank, insert count, and stage length are fixed per tier and written into the agreement — so you know what you bought before you sign.

THE FALL SEASON

Sponsor the season, not the day.

Two events this fall under one banner. One partner slot runs across both — and carries rights no single-event tier can buy.

SEASON PARTNER • ONE SLOT

INVESTMENT

The whole fall, one signature.

$TBC

BILLING

Named across both events — the season carries your name, not just one date.

EXCLUSIVITY

Your category locked for the whole fall. No competitor on either stage.

ALWAYS ON

Homepage placement year-round, not just the week of the event.

FIRST REFUSAL

First call on the 2027 season before it goes to anyone else.

SYSTEM PARTNER • LOCKED

Cognition

Cognition sits above the season as System Partner — a standing relationship across everything VanSpace runs. Season Partner is a separate, single, still-open slot.
